THE COMPANION TO LANGUAGE ASSESSMENT

Edited by ANTONY JOHN KUNNAN

The Companion to Language Assessment provides a state-of-the-art overview of the crucial topics for scholars and practitioners of language assessment, teaching and learning. Available online or as a four-volume print set, it examines the multifaceted dimensions of language assessment – from the assessment of individual skills, the design of assessments, and their impact on language learners, to how research is conducted and assessment is practised around the world.

Comprising 140 chapters, the Companion is organized thematically by volume:

- VOLUME I: Abilities, Contexts, and Learners
Examining the assessed skills of language learners including aptitude, listening, speaking, grammar, and literacy, among others, and assessing learners from young language learners to working professionals
- VOLUME II: Approaches and Development
Discussing assessment in the classroom and on a large scale, developmental tools such as designing and writing assessments, and current technological approaches
- VOLUME III: Evaluation, Methodology, and Interdisciplinary Themes
Exploring evaluation of assessments through quantitative, qualitative, and mixed approaches and interdisciplinary themes; among others, from philosophy, language acquisition, forensic sciences, and legal and ethical issues
- VOLUME IV: Assessment Around the World
Featuring coverage of assessments in English and other languages from around the globe

This work brings together the leading voices and cutting-edge research in this critically important field. It is a key resource for scholars and practitioners in the fields of language teaching and learning, language policy and planning, language assessment and evaluation, and education at all levels.

About the editor
