Companion to Biological Anthropology (2nd Edition)

C Larsen

A fully revised and forward-looking new edition of the bestselling companion text to the field of biological anthropology

Few scientific fields are developing as rapidly as biological anthropology, the study of humans as an organism, our anatomy and behavior, and our evolutionary relationships with our hominin and primate relatives. Advances in genetic and ancient and modern DNA research, behavioral anthropology, nutrition science, and more have contributed to enormous growth in a subject area that is reshaping our understanding of what makes us human.

Life Is Not Useful

Ailton Krenak, Alex Brostoff, Jamille Pinheiro Dias

Indigenous thinker and leader Ailton Krenak exposes the destructive tendencies of our 'civilization': rampant consumerism, environmental devastation and a narrow and restricted understanding of humanity's place on this Earth.

For many centuries, Brazil's Indigenous peoples have bravely faced threats of total annihilation and, in extremely adverse conditions, have reinvented their lives and communities. At a time when the COVID-19 pandemic has forced the rest of the world to reconsider its lifestyle, Ailton Krenak's clear and urgent thinking emerges with

Aesthetics of Pop Music

Diedrich Diederichsen

In this short book, the leading German cultural critic Diedrich Diederichsen puts forward a fresh and original account of pop music. He argues that pop music is not so much a form of music but rather a constellation of different media channels, social spaces and behavioural systems, of which music is only part. As a constellation, pop music relates to other forms of music – popular, classical or folk – in the way that photography relates to painting, or cinema to theatre. Its own logic of attraction is based less on compositions and the expression of subjectivity and more on indexicality, real ...

Masculinities in Theory: An Introduction (2nd Edition)

T Reeser

Gender studies have been a core component of Western humanities education since the early 1990s. At its core, gender studies are concerned with the cultural and social forces that shape our ideas about gender and sexuality, and as gender studies programs have become firmly established in humanities and social science departments at international universities, the central concepts and concerns of gender studies have taken on interdisciplinary significance in fields such as literature, art history, film, communications, linguistics, sociology, anthropology, political science, history, and philos...

The Internet of Animals: Human-Animals Relationships in the Digital Age

D Lupton

'The internet is made of cats' is a half-jokingly made claim. Today, animals of all shapes and sizes inhabit our digital spaces, from the monitoring of wildlife and feral animals to wearable devices and RFID chips for livestock.

In this book, Deborah Lupton explores how digital technologies and datafication are changing our relationships with other animals. Playfully building on the concept of 'The Internet of Things', it discusses the complex relationships and feelings that have developed between people and animals online and through the use of digital devices, from the rapid dissemination of

Perfect: Feeling Judged on Social Media

Rosalind Gill

Compared with previous generations, young people today live in a world where images of women's bodies are ubiquitous. Social media are replete with images of 'perfection'. But many of these images are unrealistic and unattainable and contribute to a pervasive sense of never being good enough: not thin enough; not pretty enough; not cool enough...

In Perfect, Rosalind Gill offers a rich and compelling analysis of young people's lives on social media. Challenging polarised perspectives that see young people as either passive victims of social media or as savvy digital

Water: A Critical Introduction

Katie Meehan

Discover the hydrosocial cycle and the impact of power, knowledge, and scarcity on water rights and use through this engaging and student-friendly textbook

In Water: A Critical Introduction, a team of distinguished researchers delivers an expert examination of our most pressing water-related challenges, arguing that flows of water are shaped by social practices and geometries of power. Combining first-hand research and headline case studies, the authors reveal the hydrosocial relations often hidden in mainstream accounts of water, delving into current issues like water scarcity, floods, global ...

February 1933: The Winter of Literature

Uwe Wittstock, Daniel Bowles

It all happened in a flash. February 1933 was the month in which the fate of German writers, as for so many others, was decided. In a tensely spun narrative, Uwe Wittstock tells the story of a demise which was predicted by some but also scarcely thought possible. He reveals how, in a matter of weeks, the glittering Weimar literary scene gave way to a long, dark winter, and how the net drew ever closer for Thomas Mann, Bertolt Brecht, Else Lasker-Schüler, Alfred Döblin and countless others.

Make History: A Practical Guide for Middle and High School History Instruction (Grades 5-12)

Paul Bambrick-Santoyo, Arthur Worrell

Make History with Your Students

From bestselling author Paul Bambrick-Santoyo and Art Worrell, Uncommon Schools' Director of History Instruction, comes Make History, an inspiring book on how educators can take history instruction to the next level. History teachers face unique challenges in introducing history lessons to students, and they are under increasing pressure to get it "right" in an age of social progress and social divisiveness. This book is a guide to bring the past to life while teaching students how to make sense of history.

Over Land and Sea: Migration from Antiquity to the Present Day

Livi Bacci

Human history has always been marked by the movement of people and populations, from the earliest movement of human beings out of Africa to the flows of migrants and refugees today. While mobility is intrinsic to human nature, migration is not always voluntary: it can be the result of free choice, but it can also be forced in varying ways and to varying degrees.

In this book, Massimo Livi Bacci examines migrations past and present with reference to the degree of free choice behind them. The degree can be minimal, as when

How the West Lost the Peace: The Great Transformation Since the Cold War

Ther

When the Berlin Wall was stormed and the Soviet Union fell apart, the West and above all the United States looked like the sole victors of history. Three decades later, the spirit of triumph rings hollow. What went wrong?

In this sequel to his award-winning history of neoliberal Europe, the renowned historian Philipp Ther searches for an answer to this question. He argues that global capitalism created many losers, preparing the ground for the rise of right-wing populists and nationalists and their remarkable successes in the 'annus horribilis' of 2016 and the aftermath.

Respect for Acting: Expanded Version (3rd Edition)

Uta Hagen

At the invitation of Herbert Berghof, Uta Hagen joined the faculty of the HB Studio in 1947. Since then, teaching has always been a challenge for her, as well as for the many prominent actors whom she has helped to develop. For many years, she has been asked to write a book. Now, here it is: an account of her own struggle with the techniques of acting and based on her teachings.

The first part, "The Actor," deals with techniques that set an actor in motion physically, verbally, and emotionally. It deals with the actor's concept of himself and with the art of acting, as well as with the actor's relationship to the audience.

Reading Shakespeare's Poetry

D Callaghan

A lively exploration of Shakespeare's poems and how they speak to readers

Reading Shakespeare's Poetry presents a fresh interpretation of Shakespeare's non-dramatic poems, providing insights into the individual poems, their themes and composition, and their relation to the cultural context of Shakespeare's world. With an engaging narrative style, author Dymphna Callaghan illustrates the ways Shakespeare's poetry often converges with reality yet remains distinct from dramatic verse and the language of everyday life.

Confronting Our Freedom: Leading a Culture of Chosen Accountability and Belonging

Peter Block, Peter Koestenbaum

Confronting Our Freedom is about reframing the common practices rising from traditional thinking about management and leadership. Most management theory and practice are about the need for clear constraints to succeed in the world where we work, but this now conventional thinking about managing calls for adaptation when working remotely has become common. This book is an invitation to freedom. Structuring our world for freedom is the path to collective accountability. It is ultimately a friendly look into how we might reimagine our participation in the working world, analyzing the strategy,

Spheres of Insurrection: Notes on Decolonizing the Unconscious

Suely Rolnik, Sergio Delgado Moya

As the globalized regime of neoliberal capitalism consolidates its grip on the world, it brings into being a new kind of micropolitics, one that involves the appropriation – what Suely Rolnik calls the ‘pimping’ – of life itself, as it turns the life drive away from creation and cooperation and towards the deadening, destructive, homogenizing practices necessary for the extractive purposes of capitalist accumulation. This dynamic is the engine of what Rolnik calls the colonial-capitalistic unconscious regime.

Drawing on examples from across the Americas, including

This is Technology Ethics: An Introduction

Nyholm

An approachable introduction to the philosophical study of ethical dilemmas in technology

In the Technology Age, innovations in medical, communications, and weapons technologies have given rise to many new ethical questions: Are technologies always value-neutral tools? Are human values and human prejudices sometimes embedded in technologies? Should we merge with the technologies we use? Is it ethical to use autonomous weapons systems in warfare? What should a self-driving car do if it detects an unavoidable crash? Can robots have morally relevant properties?

Objects Untimely: Object-Oriented Philosophy and Archaeology

Harman

Objects generate time; time does not generate or change objects. That is the central thesis of this book by the philosopher Graham Harman and the archaeologist Christopher Witmore, who defend radical positions in their respective fields.

Against a current and pervasive conviction that reality consists of an unceasing flux, a view associated in philosophy with New Materialism, Object-Oriented Ontology asserts that objects of all varieties are the bedrock of reality from which time emerges. And against

Absence: On the Culture and Philosophy of the Far East

Byung-Chul Han, Daniel Steuer

Western thinking has long been dominated by essence, by a preoccupation with that which dwells in itself and delimits itself from the other. By contrast, Far Eastern thought is centred not on essence but on absence. The fundamental topos of Far Eastern thinking is not being but 'the way' (dao), which lacks the solidity and fixedness of essence. The difference between essence and absence is the difference between being and path, between dwelling and wandering. 'A Zen monk should be without fixed abode, like the clouds, and without fixed support, like water', said the Japanese Zen master D g...

If Auschwitz is Nothing: Against Denialism

Donatella Di Cesare, David Broder

Ever since the end of the Second World War when the sheer enormity of the Nazi crime against the Jews became apparent, there have been repeated attempts to deny that the Holocaust really happened. The existence of gas chambers was questioned and the testimony of survivors was thrown into doubt: the more witnesses spoke out, the more they were intimidated and attacked by a denialism that sought to present itself as a search for historical truth.

The accusation of trickery and deception – so central to the centuries-old anti-Jewish hatred – continues to thrive in our times. Today denialism take...

Latour-Stengers: An Entangled Flight

Pignarre

Certain great friendships have left their mark in the annals of philosophy – and without a doubt, the friendship of Bruno Latour and Isabelle Stengers is among them. Although they have written very few texts together, their intellectual companionship has lasted for over thirty years and their respective work can be fully understood only when the many inter-connections of their thought are brought to the fore.

Latour and Stengers occupy the same starting place, one which remains at the heart of their work: scientific practice, which is the pride of modernity. Why do we Moderns

The Conservative Party After Brexit: Turmoil and Transformation

Tim Bale

The Conservative Party can lay convincing claim to being the world's most successful political party, not least because it is also one of the most adaptable, often appearing to do and say pretty much whatever it takes to win. But has it now taken things too far?

Since the UK voted to leave the EU back in 2016, the Tories have arguably done more than simply re-shape themselves: rather, they seem to have transformed themselves from a mainstream centre-right party into a counter-intuitive combination of radical right-wing populism and market fundamentalism that, some

Russia Against Modernity

Etkind

Putin's war is a 'special operation' against modernity. The invasion has been directed against Ukraine, but the war has a broader target: the modern world of climate awareness, energy transition and digital labor. By trading oil and gas, promoting Trump and Brexit, spreading corruption, boosting inequality and homophobia, subsidizing far-right movements, and destroying Ukraine, Putin's clique aims at suppressing the ongoing transformation of modern societies.

Alexander Etkind distinguishes between Russia's pompous, weaponized paleomodernity, on the one hand, and the less successful, more modernist

Taking Control: Sovereignty and Democracy After Brexit

Philip Cunliffe, George Hoare, Lee Jones, Peter Ramsay

The British political system is running on empty. Its ruling elite has emerged from the long Brexit crisis apparently just as clueless and incompetent as it was before. Why is this, and what can the British people do to truly 'take control'?

Taking Control argues that neither side in the Brexit debate really understood the European Union or what was involved in reclaiming Britain's sovereignty. The EU is neither a supranational nanny state, nor an internationalist peace project. It is the means by which Europe's elites transformed their own states to, and to the world.

The New Age of Catastrophe

Alex Callinicos

The world is entering a new Age of Catastrophe. The exceptional is becoming normal. The last such crisis, between 1914 and 1945, witnessed two World Wars, the Great Depression, and the Holocaust. Now humankind faces fresh existential threats – the COVID-19 pandemic, wildfires, floods, and other extreme weather events caused by accelerating climate change, and the danger of nuclear war in the wake of Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

These threats, argues Alex Callinicos, have their common source in a multidimensional crisis of the capitalist system, which is hitting the buffers, hurling us towards...

Susan Neiman

If you're woke, you're left. If you're left, you're woke. We blur the terms, assuming that if you're one you must be the other. That, Susan Neiman argues, is a dangerous mistake.

The intellectual roots and resources of wokeism conflict with ideas that have guided the left for more than 200 years: a commitment to universalism, a firm distinction between justice and power, and a belief in the possibility of progress. The woke may do some good in the short term but without these ideas, Neiman argues, they will continue to undermine their own goals and drift, inexorably and unintentionally, towards...

What is Intergenerational Justice?

Axel Gosseries

Can people alive now have duties to future generations, the unborn millions? If so, what do we owe them? What does "justice" mean in an intergenerational context, both between people who will coexist at some point, and between generations that will never overlap?

In this book, Axel Gosseries provides a forensic examination of these issues, comparing and analyzing various views about what we owe our successors. He discusses links between justice and sustainability, and looks at the implications of the fact that our successors' preferences are heavily influenced by what we will actually leave the...

History and Politics: Selected Writings, Volume 2

A victim of the Nazis, then the Communists. Twice a refugee, yet always remaining a committed socialist. In countless ways, Zygmunt Bauman lived the political upheavals of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. He was an actor within them. Bauman's own lived history informed his politics, which found expression in varying degrees in his sociology, as he wrote extensively on socialism, democracy, bureaucracy, morality, Europe, and the Jewish experience.

This volume brings together hitherto unknown or rare essays by Bauman on the themes of history and politics.

Why We Disagree about Inequality Social Order vs. Social Justice: Social Order vs. Social Justice

Iceland

Why do we disagree about the causes of and solutions to social inequality? What explains our different viewpoints on Black Lives Matter, #MeToo, income inequality, and immigration?

In this tightly argued book, John Iceland, Eric Silver, and Ilana Redstone show how two clashing worldviews – one emphasizing Social Justice and another Social Order – are preventing Americans from solving their most pressing social problems.

The authors show how each worldview provides a different

Naked Feminism: Breaking the Cult of Female Modesty

Victoria Bateman

Is it right that, despite the promises of feminism, women's bodies remain at the mercy of state, society and religion? Should a scantily-clad woman, or a promiscuous one, be worth less than a fully-covered woman, or a chaste one? Are being sexy, and being smart, really mutually exclusive? Can a woman be both body and brain? Victoria Bateman has confronted these questions with actions as well as words. She has appeared naked on national television, on stage, in art, and at protests – using her body, as well as her brain, to deliver her message.

Land Sickness

Schultz

As a heat wave hits Paris, the author's entire existence is disrupted and disoriented by the effects of climate change. All his normal reference points are destroyed. He can't sleep because of the heat, and he's plagued by the thought that everything he does to try to cool down – turn on the air conditioning, take a cold shower – uses more energy and only makes the problems worse. To escape the heat and his growing anxieties, he flees to the small Mediterranean island of Porquerolles. But even on these idyllic lands, can he escape the harsh realities of the Anthropocene?

The Paradox of Freedom: A Biographical Dialogue

David Scott, Orlando Patterson

The Paradox of Freedom is an exploration of the life and work of Orlando Patterson. Structured as a biographical interview, the book probes the relationship between the circumstances of his life from their beginnings in rural Jamaica to the present and the complex development of his still-unfolding intellectual work. A novelist and historical sociologist with an orientation toward public engagement, Patterson exemplifies one way of being a Jamaican and Black Atlantic intellectual.

At the generative center of Patterson's work has been a
