Autonomous Transformation: Creating a More Human Future in the Era of Artificial Intelligence

Brian Evergreen

From technologist and strategist Brian Evergreen, a bold new agenda for the role of organizational leaders in creating a more human future with technology

Social good initiatives are incompatible with the current network of systems that make up and support the private and public sectors. Millions of dollars have been invested in bringing leaders together from organizations around the world to design solutions for global challenges such as the climate crisis, child labor, racism, war, and many more. Despite executive buy-in, alignment of core capabilities

Genetic Theory and Analysis: Finding Meaning in a Genome (2nd Edition)

DE Miller

Understand and apply what drives change of characteristic genetic traits and heredity

Genetics is the study of how traits are passed from parents to their offspring and how the variation in those traits affects the development and health of the organism. Investigating how these traits affect the organism involves a diverse set of approaches and tools, including genetic screens, DNA and RNA sequencing, mapping, and methods to understand the structure and function of proteins. Thus, there is a need for a textbook that provides a broad overview of these methods.

Decolonizing Literature: An Introduction

Anna Bernard

Recent efforts to diversify and decentre the literary canon at universities have been moderately successful. These, however, are only the start of a broader decolonization of literary studies as a discipline; there is much left to be done. How can students and educators best participate in this urgent intellectual and political project?

Anna Bernard argues that the decolonization of literary studies requires a change to not only what, but how, we read. In lively prose, she explores work that has already been done, both within and beyond the academy, and challenges readers to think about where w...

Migration as Economic Imperialism: How International Labour Mobility Undermines Economic Development in Poor Countries

Immanuel Ness

For several decades, wealthy states, international development agencies and multinational corporations have encouraged labour migration from the Global South to the Global North. As well as providing essential workers to support the transformation of advanced economies, the remittances that migrants send home have been touted as the most promising means of national development for poor and undeveloped countries.

As Immanuel Ness argues in this sharp corrective to conventional wisdom, temporary labour migration

Boundless: A New Mindset for Unlimited Business Success

Afshar

Silos kill companies. They've always slowed companies down and threatened their success but the more connected the world becomes and the greater the rate of change and innovation, the more deadly these silos are becoming. And yet they're everywhere, and that is because our companies are built to be silos or collections of silos, the inheritance of an earlier age when corporations were centers of control, and consumers had no connections, no information, no capabilities. But now, none of those old conditions apply. We need an entirely new mindset and design paradigm for this newly

Great People Make People Feel Great: When Managers Step Up and Become Leaders

S Holah

Why Cloud Nine Thinking?

"If you want to grow, start by making other people feel taller"

This sentence is one I find myself sharing more than any other when speaking with entrepreneurs, business owners and especially large organisations when they ask how they should attract and retain great talent. These managers know that people are the key to helping them stand head and shoulders above the competition and they are genuine in their desire to foster talent in their teams. Yet most of them are seeking that magic one thing they can

Institutional and Organizational Economics: A Behavioral Game Theory Introduction

Ellingsen

Why do some countries succeed while others struggle? Why are some firms profitable while rivals fail? Why do some marriages thrive and others end in divorce? The questions seem unrelated, but societies, companies, and marriages have one important thing in common: They involve more than one individual. They thus face the same fundamental challenges. How can people be made to help rather than hurt each other? How can they use sacrifice, cooperation, and coercion to promote the common good?

In this introductory text, Tore Ellingsen equips readers to answer essential questions around the success of

Leadership Wise: Why Business Books Suck, but Wise Leaders Succeed

John W. Foreman

Why do so many business books feel useless the moment they come in contact with your day job?

Business books often contradict one another, each providing advice that's only helpful some of the time, and exhaustingly, your boss is going to cherry pick only the books that suit their way of working.

Additionally, too often leadership books push fundamentally changing your personality to look like some idealized leader, often some dude. That dude may not even be a business leader! They might be a marine, a mountain climber or a politician. Their stories might inspire

The Tiger and the Rabbit: A Fable of Harnessing the Power of the Metaverse, WEB3, and AI for Business Success

Sandy Carter

The internet was created to bring us together. But somewhere along the way, that vision was lost. We handed over our data to centralized figures, allowed big tech to thrive off our creations, and accepted our place in a system that is seemingly out of our control. However, in the far corners of the internet, a new story is being written. The authors are not big tech. No. The authors are you and me. Some of the learnings will center around Web3, NFT and the Metaverse. Let this be your on-ramp to the future of the digital world.

The Missing Billionaires: A Guide to Better Financial Decisions

V Haghani

Over the past century, if the wealthiest families had spent a reasonable fraction of their wealth, paid taxes, invested in the stock market, and passed their wealth down to the next generation, there would be tens of thousands of billionaire heirs to generations-old fortunes today. The puzzle of The Missing Billionaires is why you cannot find one such billionaire on any current rich list. There are a number of explanations, but this book is focused on one mistake which is of profound importance to all investors: poor risk decisions, both in investing and spending. Many of these families didn't...

Against Decolonization: Campus Culture Wars and the Decline of the West

Doug Stokes

Following the killing of George Floyd in 2020, a moral panic gripped the US and UK. To atone for an alleged history of racism, statues were torn down and symbols of national identity attacked. Across Universities, fringe theories became the new orthodoxy with a cadre of activists, backed by university technocrats, adopting a binary worldview of moral certainty, sin, and deconstructive redemption through Western self-erasure.

This hard-hitting book surveys these developments for the first time. It unpacks and challenges the theories and

Failing Moms: Social Condemnation and Criminalization of Mothers

Caitlin Killian

While many claim that being a mom is the most important job in the world, in reality, motherhood in the United States is becoming harder. From pre-conception, through pregnancy and while parenting, women are held to ever-higher standards and finding themselves punished - both socially and criminally - for failing to live up to these norms.

This book uncovers how women of all ethnic backgrounds and socio-economic statuses have been interrogated, held against their will, and jailed for a rapidly expanding list of

Perfect: Feeling Judged on Social Media

Rosalind Gill

Social media is replete with images of 'perfection'. But many are unrealistic, and contribute to a pervasive sense of never being good enough: not thin enough; not pretty enough; not cool enough. Try too hard and you risk being condemned for seeming desperate, don't try hard enough and you're slacking.

Rosalind Gill challenges polarised perspectives that see young women as either passive victims of social media or as savvy digital natives. She argues the real picture is far more ambivalent. Getting likes and followers and feeling connected to friends feels fantastic, but posting material and wo...

The Case for the Centre Right

Gauke

The Gender Order of Neoliberalism

Radhakrishnan

What do mompreneurs, angry working-class men, and migrant domestic workers all have in common? They are all gendered subjects responding to the economic, political, and cultural realities of neoliberalism's global gender order.

In this ambitious book, Radhakrishnan and Solari map the varied gendered pathways of a global hegemonic regime. Focusing on the US, the former Soviet Union, and South and Southeast Asia, they argue that the interconnected histories of imperialism, socialism, and postcolonialism have converged in a new way since the fall of the Soviet Union, transforming the post-war inte...

After Nativism: Belonging in an Age of Intolerance

Ash Amin

Increasingly, many people in the democracies are turning to a strongarm politics for reassurance against globalisation, uncertainty and precarity. In countries ranging from the US and Britain to Brazil, India and Turkey, support grows for a nativist politics attacking migrants, minorities, liberals and elites as enemies of the nation. Is there a politics of belonging that progressive forces could mobilise to counteract these trends?

After Nativism takes up this question, arguing that disarming nativism will require more than improving the

Also a History of Philosophy: Volume 1: The Project of a Genealogy of Postmetaphysical Thinking

Habermas

This is the first volume of a ground-breaking new work by Jürgen Habermas on the history of philosophy. Here Habermas sets out the ideas informing his systematic account of the history of Western philosophy as a genealogy of postmetaphysical thinking. His account goes far beyond a vindication of the enduring relevance of philosophical reflection founded on communicative reason as a source of orientation in the modern world. He contrasts this conception in the opening chapter with prominent diagnoses of the supposed crisis of

Getting China Wrong

AL Friedberg

The West's strategy of engagement with China has failed. More than three decades of trade and investment with the advanced democracies have left that country far richer and stronger than it would otherwise have been. But growth and development have not caused China's rulers to relax their grip on political power, abandon their mercantilist economic policies, or accept the rules and norms of the existing international system. To the contrary: China today is more repressive at home, more aggressive abroad, and more obviously intent on establishing itself as the world's preponderant power than at...

How to Slay a Dragon: Building a New Russia After Putin

Khodorkovsky

Mikhail Khodorkovsky is one of the most astute observers of today's Russia. Imprisoned for a decade in Russia's prisons on politically motivated charges, he knows all too well the best and the worst of his country. He now lives in exile and, like many Russians who live abroad, he longs for the day when he can return to a free and democratic Russia.

This book is Khodorkovsky's account of what is happening in Russia today and what could happen in the future. Putin will not last forever: sooner or later, there will be a

The Fatal Breath: Covid-19 and Society in Britain

David Vincent

The Fatal Breath is the first full-scale history of the Covid-19 pandemic in Britain. Deploying a rich archive of personal testimonies together with a wide range of research reports and official data, it presents a moving and challenging account of the crisis that enveloped Britain (and the world) in the spring of 2020.

With sensitivity, care, and a historian's critical eye, David Vincent places the pandemic in context. While much contemporary commentary has assumed people were forced to develop entirely new ways of living and working during lockdown, Vincent reveals how the population was

The Future of Foreign Policy Is Feminist

Kristina Lunz, Nicola Barfoot

As old white men continue to dominate the national and international stages, the needs of women and minorities are constantly ignored. International politics are shaped by a ruthless competition for advantage and the world is full of conflicts, crises and wars. Things have to change.

Activist and political scientist Kristina Lunz is on a mission to do just that. In her work from New York to Bogotá, from Germany to Myanmar, she became aware of a stubborn unwillingness to think past the status quo and to embrace new, innovative voices from marginalised groups. She also saw that the tradition o...

The Middle East: A political history from 395 to the present

Jean-Pierre Filiu, Andrew Brown

The Middle East, often referred to as the cradle of the three monotheisms, is saturated with symbolism. Situated at the crossroads of Asia, Africa and Europe, it is a land marked by the rich confluence of religions and peoples. At the same time, it has been the focal point of endemic tensions and conflicts, many of which stretch back into the mists of time.

In this new history of the Middle East, Jean-Pierre Filiu looks beyond religion and focuses his attention on the processes by which powers and their areas of domination were established over time. His starting point is 395 AD
